

Stone-Campbell Journal Advertising Rates and Specifications

(June 1, 2009)

Description

Published since 1998, SCJ is a semi-annual academic journal providing a scholarly platform for biblical interpretation, history, theology, philosophy, apologetics, and cultural criticism for those who value the perspective of the Stone-Campbell Restoration Movement and who endeavor to advance its distinctive principles today.

Publisher

SCJ is published by Stone-Campbell International, a non-profit corporation formed in 2005 to foster, produce, disseminate, and preserve scholarship in the Stone-Campbell Restoration Movement.

Subscribers

SCJ has a subscription base of about 600 high-quality, influential individual subscribers who are professors, ministers, and students in three streams of the Stone-Campbell Restoration Movement, Churches of Christ (a cappella), Christians Churches (independent), and Disciples of Christ. Every academic institution of higher education, colleges, universities, and graduate schools, from these two streams are subscribers, as well as the three primary graduate schools of the Disciples of Christ, plus many evangelical schools and major public and private universities.
